cient military ability, or is ailing, or too old. Sometimes the chief's son or one of his relatives is entrusted with the command. But any Bedouin conspicuous for his prudence and bravery in time of war may be promoted from leader of the men on foot to leader of mounted men and may even be recognized as the commander-in-chief. The chief generally tries to gain his favor, marries his daughter to him, and adopts him into his kin, but likewise may bring about his death on finding that the commander does not wish him well. For a leader who rises in such a manner usually deposes the reigning kin and becomes chief himself. Therefore the members of the reigning kin are very careful when choosing a chief and recognize only the most distinguished of their kin. This is also the reason why the dignity of a chief does not pass from father to son as a matter of course.

The commander of the smaller expeditions gives notice to his friends: "We intend to start on foot — or on horseback — on a raid, nabṛi nchanšel or ne'ajjer." When some men have declared their willingness to participate, he says to them:

"We shall go when the sign is favorable, nimedd bel-waǧbet az-zêne, either on Monday or Thursday."

For the small expeditions dark nights are the most suitable, lejâl aẓ-ẓalma' zêne lil-ma'âjir w-al-ḥanšel. But by far the best is the lejlet as-sarra, the last night of the lunar month, when the moon does not appear at all, "as he is then staying with the sun." On clear nights, lejâl al-ḳamra, small expeditions are never undertaken. Among the seasons of the year the cold period is the most favorable, as there is not so much danger from thirst, which is greatly feared. On the whole, both small and large expeditions are made preferably in the time of abundance, rabî', when edible plants, good pasture, and plenty of water may be found anywhere. This is the time when the inner desert swarms with raiders of every description.

Preparations for a Large Raid

Whenever the commander intends to undertake a large raid, jimedd ṛazzâj, he announces it to the chiefs in substantially these words: "Behold! we wish to go on a large raid under the leadership of the All-Highest. Shoe your horses and prepare supplies for yourselves, chdû ḥejlkom w-wazzenû zehâbkom. Behold! ye will assemble at the appointed place on
